By Jon Gómez (Pintureando.com)

1 First, a metallic primer is applied, using Hobby Paint Spray Metallic Gray 28.031.

2 A quick wash is applied throughout the armor, using a mixture of Game Ink Skin Wash 72.093 and a pinch of Game Ink Black 72.094.

3 Game Ink Black 72.094 is used to paint other parts of the armor.

4 Model Color Gunmetal Grey 70.863 is applied over the entire armor using the dry brush technique.

5 The weapon is painted black, using Model Color Black 70.950.

6 Then, the edges of the weapon are outlined, using Model Color Neutral Grey 70.992.

7 All the edges and corners of the weapon are painted using Model Color White 70.951.

8 In the following steps we want to achieve a green lighting effect. To do this, first of all, all the areas that we want to illuminate are painted using Model Color White 70.951.

9 A highly diluted Game Air Dead White 72.701 is applied by airbrush on the outer areas of all the points that had previously been painted white.

10 A mixture of 2 parts of Game Ink Yellow 72.085 to 1 part of Game Ink Green 72.089 is applied by airbrush, striking the central part of the points of light.

11 The airbrush is used to apply Game Ink Verde 72.089 to all the outer areas of the light effect.

12 All the central points of the light effect are painted with a brush, using Model Color White 70.951.
